SALMON THE attached condensed tables should prove very useful to engineers and contractors, particularly if they will cut them out and paste them in their notebooks. By holding the diagram up at arms length with the cut of the slings about in line with a sling in use, the approximate angle of the sling in use can be estimated, and the appropriate column used, to find the probable safe load on new, treated manila-rope 4-part slings. Of course one will have to exercise judgment as to the Diam of manila rope Max pull lb. on hauling part Number of parts of rope at the lower or moving block 1,700 Triple block 1,325 present condition of the sling or tackle he may be using, and take a lighter load if the rope is old, worn, cut, or if the conditions of service make it necessary, as for example the damage which might result from an accident, wind, jerks, etc. In using tackles the strength of the hooks should be considered as well as the rope, remembering that in hoisting, the hook of the upper block must carry the load on the lower block plus the rope pull plus the weight of the tackle; thus with a double and single J-in. tackle, the maximum load is given as 1,700 lb....
