TN the year 1834 I received, for the second time, a call to Elberfeld. This gave rise to a new conflict within me, and to new commotion in the two congregations. My uncle had been compelled to promise to the friends in Elberfeld that he would wave a white handkerchief from the attic window of his house as soon as he received from me a favourable answer to the call. The day did come when the handkerchief was waved from the window. But I needed one also to wipe the tears from my eyes; for the departure was to me a sorrowful occasion, despite the joyful congratulations with which I was now on all hands saluted--as sorrowful to me, indeed, as it was to the beloved friends who crowded around me, for whom I cherished a deep affection, and whose displeasure, giving occasional expression to itself, grieved me more than their sorrow did. Enough. I took my departure; but, to me, it was as if I had lifted my anchor to sail away from a peaceful haven out into a stormy sea, full of dangerous rocks. I knew the proud traditions, the extensive Bible knowledge, the high expectations from their pastors, and the excessive critical tendencies by which this large congregation was distinguished. I knew about their sometimes impetuous contention for freedom and independence; the intensive strength of the so-called lay element representing them in presbytery; the boldness, often severe...
