William Morrow. 1 Cloth(s), 2014. hard. Book Condition: New. The author of Fermat's Last Theorem, Descartes' Secret Notebook, and God's Equation, science writer and mathematician Amir Aczel here refutes the overreaching claims of strident intellectual atheists to explain how there is still much space for the divine in the universeand why faith in both God and empirical science are not mutually exclusive. Based on interviews with 11 Nobel Prize winners and other prominent scientists, as well as leading theologians and spiritual leaders, the book surveys the history of science and constructs an incisive analysis of the religious implications of our ever-increasing understanding of life and the universe. Respectful of both science and faith, Aczel reminds us that science, at its best, is about the dispassionate pursuit of truthnot a weapon in cultural debates."A mathematician with a Berkeley-Harvard résumé, Aczel wields impressive intellectual weapons in demolishing the New Atheists' claims that science has disproven the existence of God. Those who truly grapple with modern science, Aczel finally avers, discover not a disproof of God but rather perplexing mysteries, such as the stunning vistas of infinity that the intensely religious theorist Georg Cantor glimpsed behind his revolutionary...
