Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Transactions of the Royal Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene, Vol. 14 Careful consideration of the matter convinces me that it is a great error to assume that the disease has existed in that country unrecognised for many years. I saw my first cases in 1905, and took great care to consult the older physicians in the fields of its occurrence to learn if they had ever seen it, but it was as strange to them as it was to me. It is, further, a notable fact that from 1905 to about 1909, the disease assumed a very malignant and fulminating type. Since that time it has gradually assumed the character of the chronic process described in Italian literature. This tact cannot but recall to one s mind the story of the visit to the Fiji Islands from Australia in 1875 Oi H.M.S. Dido, with measles aboard. According to the account of Sir William Osler, 40,000 out of 150,000 population died in four months. It was presumed that this was virgin soil for measles, and that since that time the death-rate has gradually approached the usual normal. Certainly, a like state of things occurred with pellagra, as I saw it in North Carolina in those earlier years, while to-day it differs little from the Italian type of the disease. This single point has been a continual obstacle in the way of accepting any view which excluded an infectious element. In all the recent work done in the study of pellagra from a standpoint of a food deficiency, it must be admitted that there is still lacking an entirely satisfactory explanation of the seasonal incidence of...
