Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: .county histories such a terrible lot of hunting through files of The Times. There are few living now who can say with one correspondent (p. 525): Iwasa reader of The Gentleman s Magazine in the days of fohn Mitford, and I rejoice to know that in these giddy-paced times its scholarly traditions have been honourably revived ; but many will rejoice with him. The Rev. John Mitford was, we believe, the only Editor of northcountry family; but the readers of the letters of Robert Surtees, of Mainsforth, to whom all earnest workers in the north are so indebted, will recollect the long and close friendship between John Nichols and himself. MAGAZINES. Bye-Gones, relating to Wales and the Border Counties, for June, contains several items of general interest. There is a note upon the Virgin s Crown, or funeral garland, a quaint custom referred to by Surtees and other writers as of northern usage. Mr. Caswell continues his notes upon the Shropshire Dialect. There is also a note relative to a cheerful North of England belief, i.e., that a person watching in the church porch on St. Mark s Eve (April 25th) would see the apparitions of those persons that are to die in the year following pass by into the church, querying the existence of the superstition in Shropshire. The East Anglian, for May, contains an interesting article upon The Mediaeval Love-Day, and continues the Lay Subsidies for Cambridge in 1326. The Naturalist, for September, is...
